Ghe miracles 22 of madame sai: of madame sai: nt katherine of a Fierdois translated from the editis of the abbé J.J. Bourassé, Tours, 1858: by Andrew Lang

Chicago: Way and Williams London: David Nutt.

1897

Copyright, 1897, by Way & Williams.

The title-page, the head- and tail-pieces, and the initials in this book are the work of Selwyn Image.

THE DE VINNE PRESS, NEW YORK, U. S. A.

PREFACE

Invited by my friend Mr. Way to translate a little book as a companion to my version of "Aucassin and Nicolete," I could find nothing more curious than the Abbé Bourasse's edition of the Fierbois Chapel chronicle, "Les Miracles de Madame Sainte Katherine" (Manuscript in the Bibliothèque Nationale). One or two very dull narratives I have ventured to omit, and have added an essay on Fierbois and the Maid's connection with the shrine.

INTRODUCTION

tale of human adven-E read in history for to various ends. Now we are allured by the various reasons and

and the future by the past, and to learn the lesson which peoples, like actual experience, and then too late. individuals, can only be taught by or we try to interpret the present Napoleon, or Cortés, or Mary Stuart; attracted by some personality, as of the fortunes of nations; again we are ture in the world, and the drama of and the historic muse might be repand the days that do not return. No resented gazing in the mystic glass as they lived, concerned with the parted generations in their costumes the visionary power of seeing the degift would be more enviable than pects of common life that is no more which reflects all the changing asnow have passed wholly out of the many trivial accidents that were things of habit to them, and that existence which we know. But history has another charm, look at in the museums; but fancy fers, armor, swords, jewels, we can tures of the men and women to whom fails when she tries to restore the pic-Shreds of old raiment, ancient cof-

Miracles of Saint Katherine

and service. The traits, minute but us treasure every hint from book or medieval Paris would teach us far essential, of the lost time escape us; were food for the appetite of the are seldom informed about the hinds captains in the great wars, but we record. We hear of princes and over familiar and over trivial for by writers to whom they seemed istence which are rarely mentioned manuscript concerning details of exicle, or from art. Nevertheless the more than we can gain from chronto live an hour in old Athens or in these were things of quotidian use mon archers and men-at-arms who who were plundered, and the comlove of the spectacle of life makes sword. In search of lore which will complete our knowledge, and fill our picture of the past, we turn from the great chronicles, as now from those of Monstrelet, Chastelain, or Froissart, into such byways of the past as the little old French manuscript which is here translated for the first time.*

The official contemporary record of Les Miracles de Madame Sainte Katherine de Fierboys seems to bring us almost within sight and touch of France during the late middle ages, and in the agony of the Hundred Years' War with England. When Jeanne d'Arc, in the most hopeless

Miracles of Saint Katherine

geons and from death at English "the glorious virgin, Madame Saint paused at Fierbois, a little town withparts of France, such as Normandy hands. Fierbois is distant from the culously released from English dun-French or Scots, whom she had miragesses, laborers, knights, and squires ings, not only of sick folk whom the walls, hung the votive offerheard three masses. Around her, on in the Church of Saint Katherine, she in a day's ride of Chinon, and there, tracted armies of the Dauphin, she from Vaucouleurs to lead the dis- ${ m hour}$  of  ${ m France}$  ( ${
m February}, 1429$ ),  ${
m rode}$ Picardy, and Aquitaine, which Eng-Katherine," had healed, but of burland had recently conquered or held containing the confessions of the men out of the wound, or the culverin was reinforced by the chapel record, body. The spectacle of these relics the rope that did not hang them, chains which failed to bind them, ously from the limbs of the devout. dungeon-doors that opened of their made pilgrimage, since the year 1375, ball that slipped harmless from the the arrow that dropped innocuous At Fierbois pilgrims consecrated the prison), or for irons that fell marvelown accord (as to Saint Peter in for death miraculously avoided, or for to praise Madame Saint Katherine by many a perilous way, men had by long traditional right. Nevertheless, out of many a remote province whom beyond all hope Saint Katherine had delivered. Doubtless these stories were recited to Jeanne d'Arc, the peasant girl who "did not know A from B," and all that she saw and heard at Fierbois must have strengthened the faith of La Pucelle in the saint who, with Saint Margaret and Saint Michael, was her own familiar friend.

* From the edition by the Abbé J. J. Bourassé Mame & Cie., Tours, 1858.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

A month later, when Jeanne was accepted by the voice of the clergy of her party, when the Dauphin was presenting her with horses, weapons, rich robes, and shining armor, she remembered the chapel of Saint Katherine of Fierbois. From Charles she would take no sword; her "voices" bade her bear an ancient spere, or whoever wrote the deit when beating a leaguer-lass with are alike unknown. The Maid broke sword of Fierbois, and its later fate thusiasm. The early history of the a great effect in rousing popular enplorable First Part of Henry VI, mocks at this discovery, which had indicated by the "voices." Shaksword was discovered in the place from Tours to make search, and the the earth behind the altar of Saint blade, which was to be found under weapon, with five crosses on the armorers could not repair the weapvictory at Patay, and the King's the flat of the blade, soon after her Katherine. An armorer was sent It was thought that now her good fortune left her; but the dauntless Maid captured a sword from a Burgundian, "a good cut and thrust piece," as she described it. At her trial, she declined to tell her judges where she had bestowed the sacred weapon. The tradition which calls the Fierbois sword that of Charles Martel (who defeated the paynim at Tours), I have not succeeded in tracing further backthan Chapelain's epic of La Pucelle, published in 1656.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Here the connection of Jeanne d'Arc with Fierbois ends, though in the chapel record we learn that on May 5, 1430, Jean Boucher said a mass for "the King, and the Maid, the worthy servant of God." Eighteen days later, the Maid was taken by a Picard in a sally from Compiégne. Not for this illustrious captive did Saint Katherine work any of the miracles whereof she was so profuse.

It was one of the charges against Jeanne that she constantly gazed at a little ring of base metal, the gift of her parents, which bore the sacred names, Jhesus, Marie. One who had seen her thus gazing mentioned the practice to Bower, the continuator of the Scottish Chronicle of Fordun. She herself, at her trial, explained that she loved the ring because therewith, as she believed, she had touched the body of Saint Katherine. She asserted that she had often embraced her saints, but she had touched with her ring the relics of the body of Saint Katherine, it is possible that, as the custom was ligious; it seems probable, therefore, are kept, and silver rings which ring had touched. Now at Mount what portion of the saint's body the She refused, it may be noted, to say which are still preserved at Fierbois. as Father Ayroles remarks, that the still presented to pilgrims by the rehave been in contact with them are body was borne thither by angels, Sinai the relics of the saint, whose by a French Crusader who acquired came a center of the cult of Saint them at Mount Sinai. Fierbois be-Fierbois relics were brought thither Katherine, but by 1375, through n'estoit nul quy y peust avenir." boys, de buissons et ronces, et si the deserted chapel," yet there Jedergrowth no man might reach "Through tangled wood and un-Beauty, "lequel estoit plain de grans the enchanted wood of the Sleeping Thither he was carried, as if through Saint Katherine in a certain place. seven years of suffering, that there also blind. He remembered, after was completely paralyzed, and was one Jehan Godefroy, of Fierbois, we learn from the chapel register, into utter disuse, and was overgrown the ruin of war, her chapel had fallen han Godefroy determined to make had been an old chapel of Madame by the wildwood. In that year, as his neuvaine. His men, therefore, hewed with axes a path through the forest; Godefroy was laid within the desecrated walls, and before his neuvaine was ended "he could see well and clear, and was whole and healed in all his members, as he yet continues to be." The chapel was consequently rebuilt in the same year by Hylaire Habert, to the indignation of his wife, as we read in the first miracle of the present collection.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Miracles of Saint Katherine

When we ask for facts about the "thaumaturgic agency" about the wonder-working Saint connected with Fierbois by popular belief, the answer is vague; indeed, practically we get no answer at all. Who was

for. In 1755 Falconius, Archbishop Katharina be the original spelling called after her, as Ekaterinoslav the prefix A i or  ${I\!\!E}$  is unaccounted Ekaterinograd. If Katherina or the Greek Church, and towns are This is still the name of the saint in ρίνη or Αἰνατερίνα, or Æcaterina. call her, not Katherina, but Alvare-"pure," but all the earliest writers derived from the Greek Καθαρὸς, real person. Her name is naturally Saint Katharine of Alexandria was a subject, and has left it unproved that wick, has written an essay on the in Cambridge, Mr. Charles Hard-Saint Katherine of Alexandria, the A chaplain of Saint Katherine's Hall patron of the chapel in Touraine

Miracles of Saint Katherine

of San Severino, throws overboard the whole legend of the Alexandrian martyr, and suggests that she and her name are variants of Ἡχαριτίνα, or Ἡκαρτερία, or of Saint Barbara.*

There is no known mention of Saint Katherine in writing before the ninth century. Catholic martyrologists can only suggest that she is the unnamed Christian lady spoken of by Eusebius.† Rufinus, the translator of Eusebius, says that this lady was Dorothea, and avers that she was not slain, but exiled under the Emperor Maximin. At the end

* The Life and Martyrdom of Saint Katherine of Alexandria. See Mr. Henry Hucks Gibb's preface to the edition of the Roxburghe Club, 1884.

† Hist. Eccl., lib. viii. 14.

stinate virtue." When we next meet of the fourth century, in which century. The author says that is five hundred years later, in the breviary, removed Saint Katherine nothing to say. In 1680 the Arch-Egypt; but about Katherine he has Æcaterina, daughter of a prince in Menologium Basilianum of the ninth with the tale of Saint Katherine, it was banished by Maximin for her ob-Eusebius, "a certain Christian lady nothing at all but the remark of believe that her legend sprang from from the calendar. It is difficult to bishop of Paris, revising the Paris commemorate saintly women of Heraclides wrote his Paradisus to Katherine is said to have lived

Miracles of Saint Katherine

later appears the story of Saint Kathwheel (her emblem in art); that the and finally we learn that Katherine the tenth, the legend has grown in that she converted them; that they for fifty sophists to reason with her though, if we know anything at all erine's wedlock with our Lord, some of her relics yet remain. Still her body to Mount Sinai, where thousand pagans; that Katherine was wheel, split by an angel, slew four was condemned to death on a spiked the hands of Symeon Metaphrastes headed. In the following century, were burned, and that she was be-Maximin for idolatry; that he sent Alexandria, rebuked the Emperor beheaded, and that angels carried about paradise, it is that there is no marrying or giving in marriage. Saint Katherine is commemorated on November 25th; she wears the red crown of martyrdom, the blue crown of preachers, and the white crown of virgins.

That she beheld the saint crowned, Jeanne d'Arc attested, but absolutely refused to give any other details as to her costume and appearance. In the old English life of Saint Katherine—the extant manuscript was written about 1430—we are told that when the saint was imprisoned by the pagan emperor "the Archangel Mychael came to counfort her"... and that "the place where she was kept closed shone

Miracles of Saint Katherine

very year when the scribe wrote ceptable to God, bot worke sadly fabled Alexandrian patroness and comforted as he did Saint Katherdungeon that new saint and martyr. these words, the English thrust into a wyth a merueylous lyght." In the prototype, Saint Michael said, in La Pucelle, whom Saint Michael schal give into thy mouth and myghtyly, for our Lord ys the words of the old English auine. To Jeanne, as to her real or schal not wythstonde, . . . . and to the whyche thyn aduersaries stronge flood of hys plenteous word wyth thee for whos worschep thou thor, "Drede not, thou mayden achast entered into this batayle: he schalt ende thy batayle wyth glorious deeth, and be so receyved amonge the worthy company of virgyns." The angel thus spoke on the eve of Saint Katherine's encounter in argument with the fifty sophists of the pagan emperor. The struggle of Jeanne d'Arc with the crowd of ecclesiastical sophists who were bent on her destruction offers a singular parallel to the trial of Saint Katherine.

And to Jeanne also in prison in 1430-31, as to Saint Katherine in the old English life then a-writing, came the angel and the voice, the promise of help to withstand her judges, the promise of release from glorious death." Before Saint Kathheuene hasty and desyred help." nedes calle unto the I behote from "And to them that in perels and from heaven bade her be comforted: our old English legend, a voice erine's own death, as recounted in believe, and to "end her battle by rendered her strong to endure, to cal, its echo in the heart of Jeanne and even if the old legend be mythilegend of Saint Katherine narrated paradise. It may well be that the martyrdom and of entrance into that ys in Normandye"—that is, it to "a Monke of the Cyte of Roue France, the English legend assigns As for the bringing of her relics into Maid had heard this incident in the

Miracles of Saint Katherine

9

by one Simon, a monk; but Richard Sinai to Richard II of Normandy Rouen, where the servant of Saint was dead before they arrived Katherine was burned in 1431 The relics were really carried from so-called,—of Burgundy, who gave up Jeanne d'Arc to the death of retary, Jean Mielot, to write her fire, was himself a devotee of Saint hostile race. Yet Philip the Good, pleasure in miracles wrought for a not of them; perhaps he had no author, using a Latin original, knew the then recent miracles recorded in Katherine, and commanded his secthe chapel register, the old English Life says nothing. Perhaps the Of Fierbois, the shrine there, and guessed that her legend is founded on no Christian martyrdom, but on animosities, Dr. Eugen Einenkel has reconciler of political and religious ages would have hotly resented the creeds; and both, as maidens and and learned Hypatia, a theory in the life and death of the beautiful d'Arc. But the piety of the middle martyrs, were fit examples to Jeanne Mrs. Jamieson. Hypatia and Saint cated to and miracles were wrought hypothesis that churches were dediboth died for their irreconcilable were noble, erudite, and holy of life; them maidens of Alexandria; both Katherine, to be sure, were both of which he unconsciously followed As if the saint were to be a by Hypatia, an incorrigible woman of heathendom.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

body from Alexandria to Sinai, was the angelic translation of the saint's of the fifty converted sophists, of the tury, there is an extraordinary growth cruel wheel, of the decapitation, of of the miraculous. Whether the tale legend, written in the eleventh cenest document, and a Latin text of the ninth century Menologium, our earlisions before our eyes. Between the into marvelous and romantic dimensufficient to prove that she ever exknown evidence is certainly not shadowy historical figure. The patroness of Fierbois, is, then, a isted at all, and her legend swells Saint Katherine of Alexandria, the

Miracles of Saint Katherine

about the real history, or even about rowed in the latter age, from Sinaitic the existence, of Saint Katherine. no sound or documentary evidence quire. It is enough that we have eleventh centuries, or was only bordeveloped between the ninth and tradition, we need not pause to in-parting jeer. Our ancestors were a of scepticism are likely to leave the ages, prayed to, attributed miracles inquiry, probably not without a point the rough and ready methods never was a living woman. At that with a dead woman who probably to, and—in the case of Jeanne is that the devout, in the middle d'Arc—actually saw and spoke The obvious and natural inference set of darkened bigots, taking imaginations for actualities, and living in fantasy. An age of scientific enlightenment has only to thank "whatever gods there be" that it is not as other ages were, nor even as these ancestors of ours.

This is the view of popular science, whose professors and lecturers may deign to throw in (as parallels to the Maid) a few stock examples of hallucinated patients, such as the unceasing Nicolaï and "Mrs. A." But, if we are to be really scientific, if we are really to exercise a judicious curiosity about human nature and human faculty, in the past and present, we cannot so lightly dismiss even these miracles of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierbois. By listening to and obeying the voice of Saint Katherine a peasant girl changed the face of Europe and the fates of kingdoms. An influence which was thus obeyed is not a thing to be superciliously neglected. Again, the facts of human nature are matters worthy of observation, and among these facts the persistent repetition of thanks for miraculous deliverances claim our attention.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

How is the fact that the stories in the following collection were told, to be explained? That they are mere forgeries of priests, for the purpose of drawing pilgrims and gifts to Fierbois, is a theory which satisfied the scepticism of the eighprayer to Saint Katherine, picks up of the marvelous. A captive, after now credible, containing no element of cases the pilgrims probably beseveral of these stories are even lieved in their own stories; indeed, often long, perilous, and costly, all the witnesses made journeys, audacious. Nor can we suppose that merely to tell lies. In a number cism of the whole proceeding is too be made of their names. The cynihave allowed this shameless use to honorable position would scarcely of noted eminence and others of it no longer credible. Persons often perhaps the majority of readers find possible, for lack of documents, but teenth century. To refute it is not

Miracles of Saint Katherine

captor at a dangerous point of a hill and does not know how to account courage enough to knock down his grace of Madame Saint Katherine. for their presence, except by the fore; or he finds a knife or a file, pass; or he conceives a stratagem and the devout imagination of the which had not occurred to him bewhile hanging, by invisible hands, delivered prisoner. Again, where "miracle" is due to the gratitude velous, the introduction of the word feels himself lifted up and supported, ceive that the amateur hangsman two or three stories, we may conthe rope fails to hang a man, as in Here there is no touch of the marwas not an expert. If the patient sation, though certainly not experienced by modern culprits who have been half hanged. As to miracles of healing, these (it is now generally acknowledged) may be wrought to an undefined extent by what we call "imagination," or "suggestion," which our ignorant fathers called Faith.

But other reported events, more startling than these, occur frequently. Doors open of their own accord. The irons fall from the limbs of the devout. Men are bodily "levitated," they know not how; and one, falling asleep in prison, awakes to find himself still in irons, in the hall of his own house! Another is

Miracles of Saint Katherine

"supernaturally" raised up to the level of a window set high in the wall, and for him the locks and bars of his huche, or cage, had already undone themselves, he knew not how.

We may, as before, assert that these witnesses, at least, were lying and knew it. Perhaps they were. We do not gain much by observing, what is perfectly true, that the undoing of bonds and opening of doors is a feature of miracle common to the Bible and to savage necromandy as well as to modern conjuring. In the life of Thomas Atkinson, a priest, hanged at York in 1616, we read of "that extraordinary event, the irons falling off his legs when he was emfalling off his legs when he was em-of Fellows of the Royal Society, and analogous, the supposed causes of alleged facts remain identical, or of the alleged facts. And while the evidence varies, but not the nature of Celtic gillies; the value of the badness, from the signed testimony is of every degree of excellence or sighted men, Hebrew prophets, and only in the religious records of the register have their parallels, not Continental savants, to the gossip Australian biraarks. The evidence all the miracles of the Fierbois and attested by many."* In brief, ployed in prayer, a thing well known world, but in the feats attributed to D. D. Home, to Highland second-narrator. Hartmann and Aksakoff make their guesses; spiritualists and savages hold by "spirits"; a little exact observation detects common sleight-of-hand in the childish tricks of modern paid impostors; the Catholic narrators allege in the Fierbois cases "the grace of God, granted at the prayer of Madame Saint Katherine."

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Here we may leave the puzzle why these narratives concerning miracles were told. That the abnormal facts reported really occurred, we are not maintaining; still less do we maintain that Saint Katherine of Alexandria had a hand in them.

We only observe that to tell such tales, often apparently in good faith, is a persistent factor in human character. A Catholic age gave them a Catholic coloring, that is all.

*See Chaloner's British Martyrology, ii. 55

If human nature, in different ages, varies little as regards the startling stories which it delights to tell, there occur great changes in superficial matters. War is war and a curse, everywhere, but our present records add fresh proof of the barbarity with which war was waged in the ages of Monstrelet and Froissart. The English in France, the Burgundians, the Scots, the companies of ill-paid mercenaries lived by plunder, and by extorting ransoms from prisoners taken in battle, or seized among the fields, or in front of their own mills,

Miracles of Saint Katherine

oner was cut off, or he was hanged. ly captive men at arms, and even and willing to pay ransom. Certainaroused because Franquet was ready robber knight, Franquet d'Arras, to Jeanne d'Arc, when she allowed a Probably the indignation caused by was promised, the head of the prislike one devotee of Saint Katherine. in the takings of castles, as our knights, were often slain out of hand, be tried and executed at Lagny, was If no ransom, or no adequate ransom, records prove. These men may ransom themselves. have been unable or unwilling to

Captives were cruelly treated; we hear of one obliged to run beside his captor's horse till he asked to be recorded) of Margarite de Monnay ordinary crime was brought against might be treated with this rigor, even when no charge of sorcery or of rare: we read about it frequently in her, we gather from the case (here the Fierbois register. That a woman of savagery was nothing strange or cages (huches).* This extreme form d'Arc was on her way to Rouen) in thus burdened, or inclosed (as Jeanne ease, and suffering prey upon victims a kind of iron stocks. Hunger, distheir legs are fixed in heavy seps, chains placed on their arms while damp ditches and cellars, or have slain. Others are thrown ironed into by the English, and though imprisoned merely as a pledge for her husband's ransom, she was held in iron bonds, and, at night, was in the sep, while no woman was in attendance onher. Thus the treatment of Jeanne d'Arc at Rouen, incredibly base and cruel as it seems to us, was not unfamiliar to the manners of the English, at least, in that so-called age of chivalry. To extort money from prisoners by brutal usage was the aim and end of giving quarter. War was organized brigandage.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

As an example of the system of ransom, we may take the case of Jehan du Chastel, who, on June 6, 1428, before the siege of Orléans and, on his refusal, challenged him summoned him to give himself up rode away, but the Englishman later no rescue." Rescued he was and toy!" said the Englishman, and Jerescue, but was seized by an Engother men-at-arms. Seeing La Hire's was the victor, and he appeared at made his vow to Saint Katherine) the lists, the Frenchman (who had add, "on my faith," or "rescue or lishman, "John the Painter." "Rends brother in peril, Jehan rode to his ther of the celebrated La Hire, and dôme, with Regnault Guillaume, broto single combat. They fought in han said "je me rends," but did not bois. Jehan had sallied from Venbegan, made his pilgrimage to Fier-

* There is a wooden cage, or huche, for securing a prisoner at Canterbury.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Fierbois to thank the Saint, arrayed in the armor of his enemy. To the truth of his tale, destitute as it is of marvel, witness was borne by Monseigneur the Bastard of Orléans, by the famed La Hire, and several others.

Perhaps the quaintest of all the stories is that which Michael Hamilton told on May 4, 1429. If he was able to march (which seems doubtful) he ought not to have been at Fierbois on that day, but fighting at Orléans under Ogilvie, Chambers, or Kennedy, the Scottish comrades of La Pucelle, for the love of the Maid and of chivalry. This Michael, whose evidence was so sensational that hundreds of people came to hear it, was born in a Scottish parish dedicated to Saint Katherine. About such parishes Mr. Hay Fleming writes to me:

"There was a chapel of St. Catherine in the burying-ground of Kilbarchan (seven or eight miles almost due south of Dumbarton). It is mentioned in the Acts of Parliament, x. 97b. But the name of the parish, as Cosmo Innes says, implies that it was dedicated to Saint Barchan. In one of its villages there is also a chapel to Saint Bride (Origines Parchiales, Ban. Club, i. 84), so I fear that parish will hardly do.

"In the parish of Bothwell there was also a chapel dedicated to Saint Katherine; and it seems that it was the part of the parish containing this chapel which was soon after the Reformation erected into a separate parish under the name of Shotts, Bartram Shotts, or Bothwell Minor, the chapel being then used as the parish church. See Scott's Fasti, ii. 297; Hamilton's Lamark and Renfrew, Mait. Club, p. 38; Origines Parochiales, i. 53, 54. Shotts should surely do!"

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Let us make it Shotts then, and congratulate Lanarkshire on having produced a narrator whose vigor of style and obvious delight in his tale distinguish him among his French allies. Another Scottish devotee, John Fary, held the pleasing post of King's minstrel, and is one of the few whose votive offering is mentioned. His was a human head fashioned in wax, with the very arrow sticking in it which had wounded himself.

Among celebrated persons mentioned in the register are not only La Hire and Dunois, but de Gaucourt, who opposed Jeanne d'Arc when she wished to sally forth and attack the English at Les Tourelles, on May 7, 1429. He was also with her when she was wounded in her assault on Paris, in the same year. Gaucourt only appears incidentally, as captain of a company of whom one lost six silver cups at an inn, cups miraculously recovered. The Scottish practice of Jeddart justice is illustrated in 1423, when some Scots who had been robbed in a certain district hanged Jehan de Pons and other sportsmen before going through the formality of trying them. The adventure of Jehan Moreau (1437) illustrates the respect entertained for sanctuaries, though it was not strong enough to protect a certain unlucky Breton.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Such are the traits of life and manners which the Fierbois register yields, grains of historical gold in the confused strata of not very plausible reports. A French priest has suggested that Fierbois might renew its fame and become the rival of Lourdes. If Saint Katherine deigned to appear at Fierbois this result would probably follow, but modern pilgrims are led thither chiefly by devotion to a saint more authentic and more recent than the learned lady of Alexandria,—by love of La Pucelle.*

*The register contains some thirty miracles more recent than those included in the Abbé Bourassé's collection, but in no case are the devotees Scottish.

THE MIRACLES

THE YEAR 1375

of Saint Espain, was building the HE year one thousand Habert, of the parish and fifteen, it befel three hundred sixty that when as Hylaire again to his own house. sorely displeased his wife. And she and left his business to do the same. that he would build the said chapel, was even too much cumbered for that he might never return nor come Therefore prayed his wife to God And it so of Fierboys, the thing that he did chapel of Madame Saint Katherine oblation, and so departed, whole and said chapel, and there made she her her eyes and began to speak, and had done his prayer, she opened her, whole and well. So soon as he and promised to bring his wife to said chapel. And at this point he And straightway he led her to the was as well as ever she had been that saint, if Madame would restore for her to Madame Saint Katherine, found her, who thereon took a vow stiff as a stick, nor ever returned to sans speech or movement, being as herself, till her lord came from the one dead, her eyes and mouth shut, befell her that she dropped down as

THE YEAR 1380

ATURDAY, vigil of Chapon, of the Paand eighty, Perrot sand three hundred Pentecost, one thou-and there was he for a whole month namely, the delivery of his body that that she won from him of Our Lord Katherine, acknowledging the grace himself thankfully to Madame Saint zarche, came to the chapel to submit rish of Saint Salvator near Luin irons, nor no deliverance could he was held of the English in chains find for himself

So made he his vow to Madame Saint Katherine, that if he might escape without paying ransom, verily he would go on pilgrimage to her chapel. And no sooner was his vow made in prison—his wife also making her vow about that same hour,—than he fell asleep, and on his waking, lo, he was in the hall of his own house, all in chains of iron as he was. And so hath he come to the chapel, to give thanks to Our Lord, and to the Virgin, and hath sworn that this is true.

HE YEAR 1383

thousand three hundred eighty and three, the Tuesday after Baster, came into the chapel here Clement de la Biere, of the diocese of Xaintes, near la Rochelle, and of the parish of Estre, who since Christmas was taken prisoner of the English in Chaluceau, he and divers others.

And when they were taken, the same Clement was right strongly bound with his arms behind his back, and his feet made fast beneath the Clement found himself hard by the keep of the English, then called he on Madame Saint Katherine, and made his vow to go on pilgrimage to her chapel here, before Pentecost, if but she would deliver him from bonds. And so soon as his vows were made the cords wherewith he was bound fell to earth, and he rode off with his horse safe and sound, though verily he who should have warded him told the English that this prisoner was escaping. And to this he maketh oath.

Present, Guillaume Le Fournier of the said parish, Guillaume Tricot, and others.

V

THE YEAR 1383

one thousand three hundred eighty and three, the Saturday after Easter, came in-

Welshman, declaring and affirming by his faith and oath, that, in the foregoing year, between All Saints and Christmas, three days before the battle which our lord the King fought in Flanders, whereof he had the victory over the Flemings and folk rebellious, he, Guillaume Oade, was lodged at Poperigue in Flanders,

Guillaume made his vow. Saint Katherine of Fierboys, to whom to flee, and they called on Madame went forth from the house, thinking men-at-arms of their party, so that variet, hearing the uproar of them the whole town was full of them. great company of Flemings and of at-arms had departed, thither came they lodged. And when the menof Poperigue, after setting fire to the Whereon the said Guillaume and his were sleeping in the house whereas hour the said Guillaume and his varlet town in all quarters. Now in that went forth of their lodgings and out They, on a Saturday about midnight two leagues and a half from Ipre, with great company of men-at-arms

62

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Then folk ran in on them from every quarter, but the varlet fled and escaped by his speed, and by grace of God and Madame Saint Katherine.

And the said Guillaume, who saw that he might neither fight nor flee, ran into a thatched house, and these Flemings knew not what had become of him. And he clomb into the roof of that house, and was there till morning. And when the fire had burned all the houses thereabout, the said Guillaume, seeing all the houses fall flaming against his, and the fire entering at front and rear, made his vow yet again to Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys.

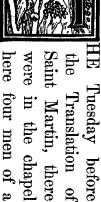

he prayed yet again to Madame and slay him with axes and pikes, and seized his purse and his money Saint Katherine, and so escaped seeing that they thought to smite scarce come forth of the water, when swimming, and so passed to the which hung from his neck. And he was taken of Flemings, that cut other side of that river. But he was arose again, he betook himself to sank to the bottom. And when he if at all he might escape death, and he leaped into a great river and deep might not avail to flee further. So all sides, so that the said Guillaume thought to get him gone. So met he Flemings who ran in on him from Then sallied he forth thereof, and places, who did him no manner of abode three days, till he could find mischief. three days he met Flemings in other them of his own party, during which forth from among them. And so village near the parish of La Souterraine, where they were taken by English men-at-arms of a garrison lodged within six leagues of La Souterraine; and the said four men were carried by the English within their said hold. There the English bound them as straitly, as they might, and beat them sorely, and so went to dinner. Then the prisoners with one at their taking, who knew them pleased her they should escape un-Saint Katherine, namely that, if it went into their own lodgings. nor wrought them any harm, but not and said no word to them, met the men-at-arms who had been within saying them nay. And they neither the porter nor any of those by the gate, which they found open, hold, into the court, and issued out feet, and they came forth of that bound fell from their hands and the bonds wherewith they were make oblations. Then straightway in her chapel of Fierboys and there the said prison, they would visit her harmed and without ransom from voice vowed themselves to Madame chapel. on pulgrimage from Vendome to the ence of several notable persons come tale is true, making oath in the prestin, they, their wives, and children, together, the Saturday after the Ocand swore and affirmed that the said Saint Katherine, they came hither to accomplish their vows to Madame tave of the Translation of Saint Mar-

Miracles of Saint Katherine

•

SINE ANNO

YEAR 1410

|HE Friday before the year one thousand four hundred and ten, came on pilgrimage Magdalene, in the a right noble and evident miracle.  ${f Ladyandof Madame Saint Katherine},$ another named Perrinet l'Auvergnat, God wrought, at the prayer of Our Thomas du Mont, for whom, and for to the chapel here a man named gundians from Rousselet and Ferretween Paris and Montleheri, by Burboue. Thence were they taken to These two men were taken be-Corbail, and there cast with three others into a fosse, narrow and as deep as a lance's length, and above them was laid a right great rock, that they might not avail to win forth.

There were they kept straitly, and so lay for full fourteen months and three days, being put at so great ransom that all their friends would have been over hard-set to pay it. And because they would not pay, they were kept on bread and water right straitly during the said time of fourteen months and three days, so hardly, and in such sort that their three fellows died in the fosse, and now it was full eight days since the last of them died, whereby the said

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Thomas and Perrinet suffered sore from the filth and the stench.

Right so prayed they devoutly to the Virgin Mary and Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys, that it would please God to free them from forth of that filth, wherein they lay. So set they them on their knees, with their faces turned as straight as they might towards the chapel of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys, and thither they vowed that they would make pilgrimage so soon as they might, after they were escaped.

Now straightway, their vow being paid, they fell on sleep, and when they woke they found themselves above the fosse, and the rock rolled away as it were two turns, the said

Jehan Chermeteau, warden of the age. But the said Thomas lay long said chapel, and of many other perthe thing is true, in the presence of witness by the faith of his body that sick ere he could achieve his pilgrimyet minded to achieve his pilgrimthey had taken in prison, he being net l'Auvergnat, of the pestilence safe and sound. Thence went they to Montleheri, and there died Perrithey a boat and crossed the water where Seine water forks. So found fosse was in the tower of Corbail two men to turn it over. And the said rock being so heavy that it needed And he hath said and borne

-

HE YEAR 1414

and four hundred and fourteen, the Thursday after the Purification of Our Lady, there passed by the Pont de Ruen the Sieur de Gaucourt and Remouet de la Guerce, having with them a great company of men-at-arms. And a man-at-arms left in the house of Jehan de Balan and Loyse his wife a casket which he forgot at the said house, wherein were six cups of silver. Now these cups had certain folk taken and carried away thefteously, Balan and his wife came the said man-at-arms, after that knowing nothing thereof. Right so ising and vowing that if Madame only that she commended herself to do, nor might find any remede. Save fer heavy loss, she knew not what to that she and her husband should sufshe must render back the casket, or render up his goods. True it is that for laying them under sore duresse to cumbered, for the man-at-arms was Then were they right dolorous and from Jehan de Balan and his wife day, to the house, demanding his gear would be pleased to pray God for Saint Katherine of Fierboys, prom-God, to Our Lady, and to Madame when the woman saw that perforce cups were found, she would travel barefoot to the chapel in this place. So came she, as she had vowed, to this chapel, and let sing a Mass. Right so, the Mass being ended, news came to her in the said chapel, that the casket and cups were found. And true it is that in the night on which she set forth, in the evening, the cups were brought into the church of Pont de Ruen, and were found there in the morning, and the thing was approven by several witnesses.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

IIIA

THE YEAR 1418

HE year one thousand four hundred and eighteen, a gentleman following the wars named Casin du Boys, was in garrison in the castle of Beaumont on Oyse, which castle the Duke of Burgundy assaulted, and the assault endured three days and three nights, and the castle was taken by force, whereon they cut off the heads of twenty gentlemen who were within that castle. And therein were Casin and divers others.

Now this Casin was taken and

Miracles of Saint Katherine

from Beaumont, and there was shut up in a case locked with a key, bound moreover was the said cage with a right strong rope all about it, and he who took Casin was minded to cut off his head, so he heard. And a man was bidden to lie above the cage, that Casin might find no manner of means to issue forth and escape.

So befell it that Casin, being inclosed in that cage, and knowing himself in peril of death, bethought him of the great and virtuous miracles which God wrought at the prayer of the glorious virgin, Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys, and of the noble pilgrimage to her chapel. Therefore he made his vows to Madame Saint Katherine, imploring her to be pleased to aid him with God, in such sort that he might escape, whereon he would straightway betake himself in pilgrimage to the chapel of Fierboys.

Right so, his vow being made, and his prayer, the said cage flew open of its own accord, and forth went Casin, he that lay above the cage perceiving naught. Now he that had taken Casin slept in the same chamber, with his chamberière, neither heard they anything.

And when Casin was forth of the cage, no manner could he find whereby he might issue from the house. Then looked he up at a window that was set the height of two men from again to Madame Saint Katherine prayer being ended, he found his also it would please her to set him he might not reach it, nor found no the ground, or thereby, so high that of this he has sworn, by the faith and ate with them, and they never gundian men-at-arms, and drank and passed many stations of Burforth of the house, and so to Creil, under the armpits. Then went he and him seemed that he was hoven breast on a level with the window, forth of the house. Right so, his was issued forth from the cage, so means to climb to it. So prayed he and oath of his body. misdoubted him. And to the truth that as by virtue of her prayer he

Miracles of Saint Katherine

X

THE YEAR 1421

HE Friday after Michaelmas, one thousand four hundred and twenty-one, Guillaume Guy, a squire, native of Piregort, was taken by the English at Rogemont in the Beauce, between Acheres and Blevies, who carried him into the Fauxbourgs of Pontoyse, and held him to ransom at fifty crowns of gold, which ransom they bade him pay or release two English prisoners. Then put they him endlong in a barrel, and shut him up therein, and above laid two great tables, and an Englishman lay on the tables.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

In the night the squire vowed him to Madame Saint Katherine, praying her to pray God to deliver him. And about midnight he found the tables scattered apart, one above, one below, and the Englishman sleeping on the ground. Then came he forth of the barrel, and escaped safe and sound, by grace of God and of Madame Saint Katherine; as also report Thomas Rouvallet, squire, Jehan Fardeau, and Clement l'Evesque, all of the fellowship of Alain Giron, who have said and sworn on oath that these things are true.

×

THE YEAR 1423

the month of April, in the year one thousand four hundred and twenty-three, there came into the chapel here one named Perrin Gougeaut, of the parish of Saint Germain de Relez, who had been taken by Burgundians the Sunday before, in the evening about sunset. There were seven Burgundians at his taking, who took along with him another man called Noriceté Girart, and bound them and coupled them together, and espenses cially the said Perrin was bound with four ropes right straitly. Then made they their vows to Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys. And instantly their vows being made, they found themselves all unbound before the very eyes of the Burgundians, who wrought them no harm nor annoy.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Then went they and laid them down in a wood, and there slept, and so escaped.

That this is true the said Perrin has sworn by the faith of his body, with these present, Guillaume Tallebot, Perrin Briant, Brother Gilles Lecourt, and many others.

IX

THE YEAR 1423

month of May of the year one thousand four hundred and laume Bressin, native of Saint-Brieuc in Bretagne, came into the chapel here, who about Michaelmas last had been taken by the English. And he was carried to Rouen and put in the fosse in irons, he and another with him. And the other went free and the said Bressin remained as a hostage for both. Now the other was

Miracles of Saint Katherine

space of seventeen weeks. Then he, not, nor came nor sent. Therefore out of the ditch. Thereon he destruck off his irons, and set him free orison, straightway the English of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierbered him of the Virgin Mary, and the said Bressin lay in prison for the for both of them. But he returned to return and bring back a ransom out ransom, no man harming him. of their hands, and went away withparted from them and escaped out boys, to whom he made his vow being in great heaviness, remem-And his vow being done and his

And the said Bressin firmly believes that he would never have escaped, save for the intercession of the Virgin Mary and Madame Saint Katherine.

of the said chapel, of Messire Jehan ence of Messire Kyrthrizien, warden by the faith of his body, in the pres-Bredar, and several other persons. And that this is true he has sworn thousand four hundred and twenty-three, Jehan de Pons, of the parish of Masuet in Berry, HE eleventh day of June, in the year one plish his vow. He had been taken came into the chapel here to accomby the said Scots, who had been and all seven were taken with him and had with him seven laborers sixth day of June, in a field of wheat, he was hunting partridges on the said by Scots, in the country of Berry, as on the sixth day of the said month, robbed in that country by brigands. Then the Scots led all eight of them to an oak tree and there hanged the seven to the said oak tree, that they died.

THE YEAR 1423

Then remained the said Jehan the last to be hanged, because he had prayed for this grace in God's name to him that took him, to this end, that he might have time and space to pray God's mercy and pardon.

There saw he all these seven hanged and strangled before his eyes.

Therefore made he his vow devoutly to Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys that it would please her to implore the grace of our Creator towards him.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

seemed that one hove him up under on a pillow, and he felt no pain on a heap of sharp stones, harming when he was hanged up, for it the halter wherewith Jehan was about a bow-shot from the said oak, riding after the others, being now high on the said oak tree, by a halter written, and to thank Madame Saint his vow in the year and date above the feet. So came he to accomplish himself no more than if it had been hanged broke asunder, and he fell Moreover he swore by the faith of bringing with him the broken halter Katherine in her chapel of Fierboys. that hanged him was mounted and that was almost new. And when he Then was he hanged the last, right said chapel, Monsieur Nicolas Raou, in the presence of Brother Jehan in the form and manner before said his body that this had befallen him Brother Gilles Lecourt, Monsieur Pierre Trincart, and several others Chermeteau, as then warden of the

THE YEAR 1425

HE thirteenth day of l came on pilgrimage January, the year one dred and twenty-five thousand four hunrevealed the miracles which follow near Laval Guion, who related and Courtin of the parish of Argentre dray, a native of Saumur, and Jehan to-day to the chapel of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys Jehan Ducou-It is to be known that on Christlay within the castle of Belesme prison of the English wherein they mas eve last they escaped from the came before the gaoler, who cried prayer being made to Madame Saint son. And on Christmas eve, their pilgrimage to her chapel, so soon as ner or means. So they all made their but could find no remede by no mantimes than once essayed to escape, some bound. And they had more others in strong prison, some ironed and were in company of several tin since the day of Verneuil fight for three years and a half, and Cour-Katherine, they broke hold, and they might, after escaping from prihan Courtin promised to come on the said Jehan Ducoudray and Jethat Christmas eve, and especially vows to Madame Saint Katherine on There had they lain, Ducoudray astir. Then clomb Jehan Ducoudray first on to the wall of the town, and met the sentinel, who seized him. Then Jehan threw the sentinel over the wall, and bade his own fellows be no whit dismayed, but put their trust in Madame Saint Katherine, that she would be their succour. So let they themselves slip from the wall into the ditch, and escaped by grace of God and of Madame Saint Katherine, and that wall was about the height of two lances.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

This they have sworn to be true by the faith of their bodies, in presence of Messire Richard Kyrthrizian, warden of the said chapel, of Robert Cornabel, and several others.

IX

THE YEAR 1425

N the aforesaid year and day (January the thirteenth, one thousand four hundred and twenty-five) came on pilgrimage to the chapel a gentleman named Jehan Godelin, of the parish of Besse in Braie, who was taken by the English on mid-August day, in the year passed. And next day was he led to the gibbet, with six of his fellows, all six being hanged before his eyes on the said gibbet.

Now even when he saw the first of the six hanged, he made his vow to Madame Saint Katherine, praying her that she would be pleased to rescue him from such shameful death. So abode he, and was led away, none harming him, and was held to ransom. And hath sworn the faith of his body that this is true. Present, the aforesaid Messire Richard, and Cornabel, and divers other persons.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

VX

THE YEAR 1425

of La Chartre sur Lair, on pilgrimage to the chapel of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys. He had been made prisoner by the English, at La Chartre, when they took the town, and he made his vow to Madame Saint Katherine when he saw the English in that place. So took they the city, and slew many, but him they harmed not, save that they put him in cages, in irons, and in strong prison. Thereafter, when they led him to Alençon, they made him run beside their horses all the way. Thereby was he so wearied, that in no manner might he go further, and so desired death rather than life, and said to his master who led him:

Miracles of Saint Katherine

"My master, I pray and beseech you, since other grace you will not do me, that you will be pleased to send me out of this world and this life."

Then said the Englishman to him," "since you are fain to die, I will slay you shortly."

So haled he the man behind a bush, and drew his naked sword. Then Jehan kneeled down, and devoutly prayed Madame Saint Katherine that of her grace she would be his comfort. And anon the Englishman struck him thrice as hard as strike he could, on his naked neck, yet cut him not, nor wounded him, nor did him no manner of harm. And when the Englishman perceived that he had wounded him not at all, he left him, and called another Englishman who had a led horse, and mounted Jehan thereon.

The said Jehan saith that afterwards he heard the Englishman say that when he had struck the three strokes, and saw that there was no wound, he remembered him of Madame Saint Katherine, and well deemed that Jehan had recommended himself to her, and so he had pity on Jehan.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

So was he led to Alençon. And when Le Mans was taken, he was led thither, and escaped without ransom, by prayer and power of the glorious Virgin, Madame Saint Katherine. And by the faith of his body hath Jehan sworn that all this is true, in presence of Messire Richard Kyrthrizian, Brother Gilles Lacour, warders of this chapel, and several others.

IIIAX

THE YEAR 1429

HE fourth day of May, in the year one thousand four hundred and twentynine, did Michael Hamilton, a Scot, esquire of the company of John Stewart, captain, present himself in the chapel of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierboys. Who swore on his oath that the miracle following is true. It is to be known that right willingly with all his power and strength he has ever served, with all his heart and devotion, the glorious Virgin Mary and Madame Saint Katherine. And even says that the parish wherein he was born was founded in the honor of Madame Saint Katherine, wherefore, for honor and remembrance of her, since he has come into France, with true heart and devout he has made pilgrimage to seek her in her chapel of Fierboys.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

He says that last Holy Week he and several foot-soldiers at arms were lodged in Brittany, in a village called Calletz, near Clisson. And he saith that on a certain day the Bretons were of force in the fields, and wished to rob the said Scots, wherefore they sent a certain spy to search out their lodgings. This spy the Scots took and questioned him, and learned from the gibbet of Clisson in his shirt, hind his back, and hanged him from will, he bound Michael's hands beother Bretons and with their good-And in truth before the eyes of the hang him for the love of his father. Michael, and vowed that he would the spy who had been hanged seized him to Clisson. Thereon the son of for the weight of his armor, and led the said Hamilton, who could not flee found, and among others they took and took and slew those whom they parted. But the Bretons came up such of the Scots as could flee desaid spy they hanged him. Then learned what they could from the to seize them. And after they had him that the Bretons were minded hose, and shoon. There was he hanged on Munday Thursday, two hours after noon. This being done, they departed.

L

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Nevertheless the said Hamilton so soon as he was taken did nothing but think devoutly of Madame Saint Katherine, and prayed that she would be pleased to guard him from death, whereon he would come humbly to thank her in her chapel of Fierboys. So prayed he more than once or twice.

So chanced it that, when he had been hanged, there came a voice to the curé of the town bidding him go speedily and cut down Hamilton. Of this voice the curé took no keep, and forgot it until the morrow, which or alive. and knew not whether he was dead turned and spun the Scotsman about see if Hamilton were dead or not, of his parish go to the gibbet and rand. And when he got thither he and bring him back the truth thereof him of the said voice, and bade one said curé had done all his service it was near noon. Then he bethought was Good Friday. And when the Wherefore the man went on that er-by his oath that as long as he was the said Hamilton felt it, he swears a knife, so that therein was a great right foot and slit the little toe with wound and much blood. And when truth, he took the hose from the Nevertheless, to know the very aid, without other thought. And it hanging he felt no harm, no more sore fear and terror fell on the mesdrew up his leg and stirred. Thereon seems him that he was hoven up undame Saint Katherine to be his rope under his arms. For when he senger of the curé, as Hamilton hath felt the wound in his said toe, he der his feet. Nevertheless, when he was hanged he kept praying Mathan if he had been hanged by a night, and considering that Hamilcuré considering his voice in the ran hastily to the curé, declaring since heard him say. Wherefore he had seen him move. Then the said that Hamilton was still alive and he ton had been hanged from Maundy and taken into a house to be nursed the said Hamilton was set on a horse. which he was blamed. Nevertheless and gave him a great wound, for struck him over the ear with a sword they looked at him, he moved. Now all they that stood by saw that it gibbet, and cut down the said Hamwho, in wrath that he was not dead he that had hanged him was present was a miracle of God, and whileas ilton. And when he was let down, great company they went to the put on their vestments and with a and the other people of holy church and proclaimed all these things to deemed that it was evident miracle, the people present. Whereafter he Thursday to Good Friday afternoon.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Miracles of Saint Katherine

and cared for. But a noble lady, the Abbess of La Regrepiere, heard of the miracle and sent for Hamilton to nurse him in her abbey.

Thither was he taken, but he says that he lay speechless till Easter day. Now seeing that he spoke not French, the Abbess gave him to another to be nursed, to whom Hamilton told all his story just as it befell, and how Madame Saint Katherine had saved his life, and how he had made his vow to Madame Saint Katherine. Wherefore the Abbess loved Hamilton the better, and gave command that he should be more tenderly nursed. So it befell that the night between Easter day and Easter Monday there came a voice to the said Hamilton, saying to him, "Deliver thee, deliver thee! Bethink thee to accomplish thy vow in my chapel of Fierboys, and I will aid and guard thee."

Nevertheless it was fifteen days before the said Hamilton could walk or start, for his wounded foot harmed him more than ought else. Wherefore as soon as he could walk, he said farewell to the Abbess and set forth on his way to this chapel, and came here very slowly, for he could not walk by reason of his foot, which was not healed.

Then saith Hamilton that he found in the fields certain of his company, with whom he abode some days to get back his strength. But while he was there, on Saturday sennight, and was lying with certain of his fellows, but yet slept not, there came to him a voice saying:

Miracles of Saint Katherine

"Already I bade thee and commanded thee to go and fulfil thy vow in my chapel at Fierboys, whereof thou makest no account. Wherefore acquit thee speedily of thy vow, and make no more tarrying."

Thereon the said voice gave him agreat buffet and a sore on the cheek, and he says that those who lay with him awoke, and asked who had struck him. To which he answered them nothing, but so soon as day broke, he set forth on his way to come hither. And to-day the said Ham-said miracle. heard tell, and say, and proclaim the many others, over two hundred, who de Rameau, Guillaume Menost, and court, Jehan Chermeteau, Jehan of Messieurs Jacques Amissel, Jehan Bredar, priests; Brother Gilles Lethese things are true, in the presence glorified the glorious Virgin, Mahath he sworn on the Missal that all which she had done him. And so dame Saint Katherine, for the grace hanged, and praised, thanked, and ing the halter wherewith he was ilton came hither in his shirt, bring-

THE YEAR 1429

neau, an esquire of the parish of |HE twenty-ninth day nine, André Estourof March, in the year hundred and twentyone thousand four by God, at the prayer of the glorious and declared the grace shewn to him virgin, Madame Saint Katherine. Manoc near Confoulant, hath said tine's day. And when he was near way to Mareuil, on last Saint Valen-Estorneau left Rochefoucault on his It is to be known that the said of his enemies, so would he come to in such guise as his enemies now held thank her in her chapel of Fierboys, recommended himself right de-Lord to deliver him out of the hands voutly, that she would pray Our erine of Fierboys. To her then he at the prayer of Madame Saint Kathsave only that he minded him of the discomforted, and knew no remede or further. Then Estorneau was sore fair miracles wrought by Our Lord to bring them to the island of Madoc. the bellies of their horses, intending and bound their feet straitly under enemies, who took him and his page, Mareuil he met two Englishmen, his

Now after he had made his vow

Miracles of Saint Katherine

said pass being steep and perilous proaching a river near Chales, the gone a little way down a glen, apcape. So took he the mantle on he had monition that he should esand more assured. And incontinent and prayer, all his heart was lighter to his fellow, "Help, I perish!" rider. Then began the man to cry struck him such a blow with his fist in the steepest of that pass, he drew lishmen. So when he found himself there was he between the two Engthe nimbler. And after they had rent it asunder, that he might fare man fell, and the horse dragged his between the shoulders that horse and near him who rode foremost, and him, when now night was come, and Thereon Estorneau crossed the path into a wood and so escaped. Then, having ridden half a league, he let himself fall backwards over the crupper of his horse, and undid his bonds, and so rode homewards at adventure, without way or path, all the night long. Yet never lost he his way, and many deep waters he forded, who had never been that way before.

Thus escaped Estorneau, by grace of God, and the prayer of the glorious Virgin, Madame Saint Katherine. And hath sworn that this is true, in presence of Messire Richard Kyrthrizian, Brother Gilles Lecourt, priests and warders of this Chapel, and Messire Jehan Bredur, priest, and others.

THE YEAR 1430

(A Latin Deposition.)

JEHAN BOUCHER,
Licentiate in Law, Canon of Tours and Angers, and Dean of St. Jean in Angers,

on Tuesday after Easter, that is, on the eighteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand four hundred and thirty, at my house in Angers, about nine o'clock at night, began to be sorely sick, with an intolerable headache that lasted till four o'clock in the morning, and, by reason of so great pain, I thought rather to die than to live. In that of that glorious Virgin, as I firmly and made my vow. Then suddenly believe, that intolerable pain ceased and instantly, by grace of God, and ever wont to pray on all occasions of gin Saint Katherine, to whom I was need, and to her I recommended me. hour I minded me of the glorious vir-

again, I set forth on foot to fulfil my vow and return thanks to God. the year aforesaid.<sup>1</sup> on Wednesday, May the fifth, in peace and prosperity of this realm, worthy servant of God, and for the for the King, and the Maid, the In the chapel here I said Mass, both Within a few days, being well piègne eighteen days after this Mass. <sup>1</sup>The Maid was taken prisoner at Com-

THE YEAR 1430

N the thirteenth of dred and thirty, came thousand four hun-July, in the year one said Pierre and four of his fellows prayer of Madame Saint Katherine. wrought by God for him, at the he set forth and declared the miracle Guillaume, brother of La Hire, and chapel Pierre du Fons of Bourges, before the feast of Saint Aignan the who is of the company of Regnault It is to be known that eight days them, who devoutly commended companion forth of Alençon to hang the morrow they led Pierre and his would give theirs, which message the sent to tell the English that such other. Now at the end of eight days English held in high despite. So on treatment as they gave his men, he their captain, Regnault Guillaume, off the head of one of the prisoners mained only Pierre du Fons and one they hanged two more, so there rehe had done them. And next day for some displeasure that aforetime their coming thither the English cut named Lignières by the English of Alençon to prison. The first day of Alençon. Thence they were led to were taken in a house or place

Miracles of Saint Katherine

mercy and pardon of God. They therefore hanged his fellow first on a he might have time to implore the the English to hang him last, that Saint Katherine. Now Pierre prayed themselves to God, and to Madame himself devoutly to Madame Saint and therein a ditch to bury the said hard by a chapel of Madame Saint walnut tree, by the wall of Alençon, dead. Then Pierre again vowed and praise her in her chapel here escape alive, he would come to thank and to aid him, wherefor, if he could God for him, and the Virgin Mary prisoners, when once they were Katherine, whereby is a graveyard Then made they him to climb the Katherine, praying her to beseech high from a branch thereof, where said walnut tree and hanged him climb the said walnut tree again, and present more than three hundred hour, till they deemed him dead he remained hanging for half an and cut the halter, that Pierre might dead indeed. So he who hanged nor foot, so that all deemed him it. There hung Pierre for more than knot so well that he might not undo him saying that he would fasten the hanged him again, he that hanged persons. Thereon they made him before all the company, there being Pierre fell on his feet on the earth Then they undid the halter, and him climbed the said walnut tree half an hour, stirring neither hanc fall and be buried in the fosse with his fellow. So fell he on ground, and straightway sat up and commended himself to Madame Saint Katherine.

11

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Thereat were all who stood by sore astonished, that die he could not, and some said that he should not be hanged again, for that it was a God's miracle. Then two Englishmen took him and carried him up into the said walnut tree, and swore by the faith of their bodies that this time he should not escape. So they hanged him again, and one pulled at his legs as hard as might be, and the other pressed down with his feet on Pierre's shoulders, as heavily as might be, even till they of God, and that he should not be deeming him dead. Then he sat up deemed him dead and strangled hanged more, or otherwise slain, for said that this was manifest miracle amazed, and certain of the English folk as were there, whereat all were and opened his eyes, looking on such was carried to the said fosse, all halter, and Pierre fell to earth, who into the walnut tree and cut the Thereafter an Englishman climbed him hanging for an hour and a half Then they climbed down and lef displeasure should be done him, but him, and commanded that no evil or the captain of Alençon came to see bore him into the said chapel, and fear of God's anger. Therefore they

Miracles of Saint Katherine

that he should be given meat and drink.

guard him, one French, the other for three weeks with two women to self to murmur against him, and back his strength, she betook her-English. But when the English would have given him to an Engwoman saw that he began to get would send for him and make him bade find some remede, or they French woman told him this and lishman to be his prisoner. But the the said chapel, and they carried that he found means whereby Kegprisoner. Thereon Pierre so wrought nault Guillaume and his company heard that they should seek him in There then abode he in that chapel of his body, in presence of messire by grace of God, and prayer of the Robert Cornabel, and others. han Bredur, priest, Loys Forest, Richard Kyrthrizian, Brother Gilles hath sworn to be true by the faith erine. All of this the said Pierre glorious virgin, Madame Saint Kath-Fons out of the hand of his enemies Lecourt, warder of the chapel, Jehim away. Thus escaped Pierre du prisoner in the town of Frenay le months in irons, bound with an iron pledge for her husband's ransom. nay, who also came hither with his gentleman named Gilbert de Frenative of Normandy, and wife of a Here lay she for five years and five wife. The said Marguerite had been Vicomte, where she was held as hither Marguerite de Mounay, a I thirty-seven, came N the twenty-third year one thousand four hundred and day of May, in the

122

THE YEAR 1437

124

were demanded of him. and night, because her husband could not pay the great monies that chain, and fastened in a yoke, day she was falling asleep, which told past, there came to her a Voice, as on the twenty-sixth day of January after she had made her vow, namely she might escape. And on the night to the said chapel, if by any means wine till she had made pilgrimage she her vow to God, and the Virgin erine, that never would she drink Mary, and to Madame Saint Kaththe chapel in this place. So made her of the fair miracles daily done in who had pity on her, remembered fort, beholding that there was none She, then, as one out of all com-

Miracles of Saint Katherine

of the yoke, that she might pass to dame Saint Katherine. Next day came the jailer, who let her go out voutly recommended herself to Maof prison. Thereon she again deher that she should be delivered out guerite kneeled down, praying Saint the chambres. Then the said jailer back in the yoke. Thereon Marwent his way, and forgot to set her took she the said irons and chains, one side, but not on the other. Then irons and chains fell from her feet on when she had done her prayer, the and hove them up to the height of Katherine to be her aid. Right so, so went forth down the street of the prison, that she found open, and her thigh, and fared to the door of Frenay, about two hours before noon, in the sight of the English. Yet was there found no man to ask her what she did. Thus was Marguerite delivered, at the prayer of Madame Saint Katherine.

That all this is true she hath sworn; present, Messire Georges Guiot, curé of Saint Maur, and Brother Gilles Lecourt, warders of the chapel, Vincent des Patiz, Guillaume Guerrier, priests, and several others.

THE YEAR 1437

of July, in the year one thousand four hundred and thirty-chapel here one Thomas de Briqueville, a knight's son, of the garrison of La Val, to whom God wrought fair grace at the prayer of the Virgin Mary, and of the glorious Madame Saint Katherine.

It chanced that the said Thomas was for three years prisoner to the English in a castle named Saint Denis, and they asked for him a ransom of a hundred saluz. He for his part offered to pay sixty, which the English would not take. Thomas therefore made his vow to Madame Saint Katherine, that, if she were pleased to aid him, he would come to her chapel in his shirt, barefooted, and bareheaded.

128

Thereon he found a manner to be rid of his irons, by help of two little knives and a little hatchet, concerning which he hath never known whence they came, save by grace of God. Thus was he free from bonds, one Friday at evening, and so went forth on the wall. Anon one asked him if he was about leaping down, whereto he answered "yea," and men ran after him, who escaped to the foot of the wall, by grace of God and at the prayer of Madame Saint Katherine. Now the hour when he fled was sunset and moonrising. Thus has Thomas accomplished his vow, in the day and year above said, and hath sworn that his tale is true.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Present hereat the honorable and discreet brother Antoine de la Motte, Messire Georges Guiot, prior and curé of Saint Maure, Brother Gilles Lecourt, and others.

hundred and thirtyone thousand four ruary, in the year of the month of Feb-

put into a cellar, and set in irons by the English in front of his own about four years ago, he was taker clared the grace wrought for him by with certain others, and there was mill, and thence carried to Alençon God at the prayer of Madame Saint Normandy, who hath told and deseven, came into the chapel here Jehan Moreau, of the parish of Ses in Katherine. It is to be known that night was in the yoke, and ever ploring her to pray God that He mended them devoutly to her, imvirgin Madame Saint Katherine. So and manifest miracles which God three other prisoners in the said celmonth of August last. Then he and hath been in this manner till the they were, and out of the hands of made they their vows and comlars remembered them of the fair weighing twelve pounds, and at from the prison, and the filth wherein would be pleased to deliver them worked at the prayer of the glorious their enemies.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

thought them of digging a mine in devised a manner of escape, and be-Anon, their vow being made, they bent the iron, and turned the bolt climbed to the said window, and in the said wall, whereby they to put one of their irons into a hole So prayed they to Madame Sain of means they might climb thereto Katherine, and then bethought then to attain unto it, nor by what manner forth. Then marked they a winfrom the ground, and knew not how dow about the height of two men prisoners knew not how to issue were barred and bolted, so that the hall, whereof the doors and windows mined till they won their way into a might undo their irons, and they found they all how lightly they devise no manner of remedy. So the said cellar, but before they could the street, yet did themselves no and crept through in their shirts. manner of mischief, and in doing all Lady in Alençon, and there were other, heard nothing of the noise all awake and devising with each the said cellar, and all they of his this made great noise and uproar Then leaped they head foremost into made by the prisoners. So passed company, some seven or eight men Yet the jailer, who was lying above a Breton named Yvonnet le Camus, day for a month, save one of them, guarded by the English night and they freely to the church of Our English dragged him forth, for they who was there but a week, and the held him in hatred.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

they passed, are amazed at the adand know the places through which venture those who have heard of this matter the said Moreau declares that all was a thing right marvelous. And the opposite bank of the fosse, which row of pikes sharpened, then climbed passed a great fence of thorns, and a themselves not a whit, and lightly said in the church; thence went they that were very deep, and harmed to the walls and ditches of the town, the morning, the hour when mass was they issued forth at seven o'clock in the prisoners, deeming that they Which when the prisoners knew would not dare to leave the church Now the English ceased to watch

136

Miracles of Saint Katherine

they betook themselves in freedom, Saint Blaise, about two arbalest shots cape in the day time. Then wanthat the prisoners would dare to esturned to Alençon, as not deeming when it was day the English remen all the night following. But and were watched by seven Englishfrom the town of Alençon. There to Madame Saint Katherine. So ture, commending themselves always dered forth the prisoners at advenand of Madame Saint Katherine o'clock in the morning, and fared they left the said chapel about nine without hindrance, by grace of God himself hither, all ironed on both And to-day Moreau has betaken Thence they went to a chapel of Guillaume Pigeon, and several others Gilles le Bouvier, Nicolas Mercier han Chermeteau, Benoist Pinart Lecourt, warders of the chapel, Je-Messire Georges Guiot, Brother Gilles he hath said is true, in presence of by the faith of his body that all which made his vow. And he hath sworn legs, even as he promised when he

THE YEAR 1438

dred and thurby came into the chapel

*-- Katherine of Fier-HE thirteenth day of March, the year one of the fair grace which our Lord hath of Madame Saint Katherine of Fierand put in prison in a deep ditch, at erine, namely, that Moret was taken rious virgin, Madame Saint Kathshown him, at the prayer of the globoys, Jehan Moret, esquire, because days and fifty nights. hath he lain for the space of fifty the Castle of Angoulême. And there Therefore he commended him to Madame Saint Katherine, imploring her to pray God for him, wherefore he would make pilgrimage to see her, if he might escape. Then anon he fell asleep, and when he woke found himself out of the ditch, and so escaped without ransom. And now is come to thank God here, and Our Lady, and Madame Saint Katherine.

THE YEAR 1439

EHAN DU RUS-LAY, dwelling at Saint Enthrope de Xaintes, declares that he was prisoner of the English at Conac, three leagues from Pons in Saintonge, and was held to ransom at thirty-five reals, whereof he had paid thirteen. And for that he had not paid the whole sum of thirty-five reals, the said English told him that they would carry him to Bordeaux and double his ransom. Then he being in great fear bethought him of Madame Saint Kathwood, and pages that had been forth met women coming from the he forth out of that castle, and being others playing at draughts. So went castle, where were the porter and and went forth to the gate of the of that place, and so took the road, would be pleased to convey him out to Madame Saint Katherine that she straw. Then once more he prayed took them and hid them under the perceived himself free of his irons, accord. He therefore, so soon as he and the nail dropped out of its own irons, the chains fell off his body, prayer being done, and he lying in pray for deliverance from that pain wherein he lay. Then, anon, the erine of Fierboys, and betook him to watering horses, but, by grace of God and of Madame Saint Katherine, no manner of mischief befell him; who hath come to-day within the chapel here to thank Our Lord, and the Virgin Mary, and Madame Saint Katherine, for the grace wrought for him by them.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

That all this is true he hath sworn before Messire Georges Guiot, curé of Sainte Maure and warder of this chapel, Nicolas Mercier, priest, Jehan Lemaire, and others, this tenth day of March, in the year one thousand four hundred and thirty-nine.

IMON LOYS, of the hither on pilgrimage, cese of Amiens, came d'Orvillier, in the dioparish of Saint Martin the chains and collars of iron on when they had made their vows, of Madame Saint Katherine. Anon kept in irons as slaves, being chained cor the King of Hungary, they were of his fellowship were riding to sucthought they of the noble miracles by the legs and necks. Then betaken by the Saracens, and were saying that, when he and certain so escaped they without any hintober in the year one thousand four drance. And the said Loys came to their legs and necks fell off, and months agone since he and his fel-He saith also that it is now six God and Madame Saint Katherine. hundred forty and three, to thank this chapel on the second day of Ocvirgin. And that all above said is lows commended them to the glorious chapel, Messire Jehan Quentin, ther Peter Queroan, warders of this true he hath sworn in presence of priest, and divers others Messire Georges Guiot, priest, Bro-forty and four came HE thirteenth day of sand four hundred in the year one thouthe month of June, great, heavy, and marvelous, that it Jean Oquilhe, of the parish of St. of Monseigneur the Dauphin named been taken by the English and into this chapel one of the archers needed four men to set him in and carried to la Rivière de Thibou-Nantes, in Brittany. This man had Guidas of the Wood, in the see of ville, and there put into stocks so dame Saint Katherine, to whom he this prison, bethought him of Matake him out. He then, being in made his vow.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

Miracles of Saint Katherine

deep that it was marvel. Thereharm, and so crossed the ditches of son, doing himself no manner of issued forth of the irons and the prifore the said Jean is come to do the place, so full of water and so several others. Queroan, warders of this chapel, and Georges Guiot, priest, Brother Pierre are true, in presence of Messire hath said and sworn that these things his vow and his pilgrimage. And Anon, the vow being made, he

HE Tuesday after the Fête Dieu, in the year one thousand four hundred forty and four, came hither Jehan Prevost, an esquire, to thank God and Madame Saint Katherine.

This man was struck by a culverin ball on the bone of the leg, and could find no cure nor no remedy, for the stone of the culverin abode fast in his leg. Anon he mounted his horse and made a vow to God, Our Lady, and Madame Saint Katherine. And he had not ridden a league, when the said stone came out by the same way that it went in, and fell to the ground. Thus by the grace of God and Madame Saint Katherine he was whole and well, as he hath said and affirmed to be true, in presence of Messire Georges Guiot, priest, Brother Pierre Queroan, warders of this chapel, Guillaume Guierrier, and several others.

Miracles of Saint Katherine

forty and six, Jehan N the thirteenth day sand four hundred in the year one thouof the month of July servant loosed an arrow which arrow passed two fingers deep into struck the said minstrel, and the archers. Now in shooting the said shooting a match with the King's garden was playing with a bow, and that one of the servants of the King's on pilgrimage, and said and swore of our Lord the King, came hither Fary, a native of Scotland, minstrel

Miracles of Saint Katherine

now has come hither whole and well, his head. He then, finding that he self to Madame Saint Katherine, and and has brought with him the said was wounded, recommended himarrow, and let fix it in a head of priests, Brother Jehan Dau, and true in presence of Messire Guilwax, weighing half a pound. And laume Pigeon, Guillaume Galerneau, hath said and sworn that this is the chapel, and several others. Messire Georges Guiot, warder of

